

IMPARTING AN ASPECT

(A poem to promote 'donation of human eyes' after death)

*The emotive human eyes
Can hold a sea of sorrow,
The discriminate little heart
Can hold an ocean of emotion;
They are not aware of any language
Yet they react and respond,
They have no barriers too
Yet they see something beyond.*

*The beauty of amazing nature
They store in warm memories,
The lovely birds and animals
They store in memories annals.
Emotion or the burst of angst
Both emanate from these sources,
The waves of love and concern too
Surge from unfathomable depths.*

*The heart may one day stop
The memories may forever erase,
The eyes but have no instant death
For, they can offer their sight
To those deprived of eye-sight
Even after a life becomes lifeless.*

*Let us script this in memory;
Share the concept of donating eyes
Which act, is an act upright!
That can provide real eye-sight
Bestowing a meaning to human birth.
It's our responsibility to impart this...
To impart this righteous aspect to all.*

- Dr. T. Ashok Chakravarthy, Litt.D
16-1-836/L, Plot-39
Madhavnagar, Saidabad
Hyderabad - 500 059 (AP) INDIA
e-mail : tacvarthy@gmail.com